Here is the updated supply scenario (all figures in inshell short tons):

Carry-in from 2011/12 season:	49,018
2012 crop production:	495,045
Total available for shipment:	544,063
Less shipments to date:	497,043
Remaining supply:	47,020

- 2012 Crop carry-out of 47,020 short tons is 4% less than prior season.
- 2012 Crop was largely sold out before summer.
- Export markets accounted for all of the increase in shipments. Domestic market was flat.
- Season to date shipments to Asia/Pacific region are up 96% (89 million pounds) for inshell and up 27% (16 million pounds) for shelled.
  - o Shipments to the Chinese market (including China, Hong Kong and Vietnam) were the primary contributor to higher shipments to the Asia/Pacific region.
- Other regions were flat or down compared to prior season.
  - Season to date inshell walnut shipments to Europe are down 17% (10 million lbs) versus prior season.
  - Season to date inshell walnut shipments to the Middle East are down 24% (16 million lbs) versus prior season.
- The National Agricultural Statistics Service released the 2013 Crop Objective crop forecast of 495,000 inshell short tons...essentially the same as the 2012 crop.
  - o Forecast is for record low nut set of 1,239 per tree, down 10% from last season.
  - o Forecast is for 98.8% sound kernels.
  - All nut sizing measurements were above average.
  - o Forecast bearing acres of 255,000 is 4% above last season.
- Limited new crop sales have taken place as prices have steadily risen on few offers in the market.
  Harvest has begun in the South part of California and other regions will begin shortly. More selling interest is expected in the coming weeks. In the near term, most major markets are uncovered and need to buy.
